CHALLENGES AND JOYS OF WORKING IN A CANDY FACTORY

Confectioners must keep strict working hours to get all the candy made. This means often getting up early.

If you have a sweet tooth, this is the perfect job for you! Working in a sweet-smelling environment with lots of candy around sounds like a dream.

But a confectioner must be sure to keep a healthy lifestyle, which includes doing sport and eating lots of vegetables to compensate for all the sweets.

As they make things loved by children and adults alike, confectioners have licence to be creative!

CHALLENGES AND JOYS OF THE ACTOR'S PROFESSION

A theatre actor needs a great memory. That they must remember their lines is a given. And as an actor often has several productions in their current repertoire, they must remember lines from them all.

Actors usually perform in the evening, when most other people have time off.

Good singing and motor skills come in handy for an actor.

Do you like to be the centre of attention? You do? Then maybe acting is the job for you! When on stage, an actor draws a huge amount of energy from the audience. An actor's artistry moves spectators to tears, makes them fear for the character, causes them to cry out in delight. The best reward for a great performance is a standing ovation.

CHALLENGES AND JOYS OF THE CAR MECHANIC'S PROFESSION

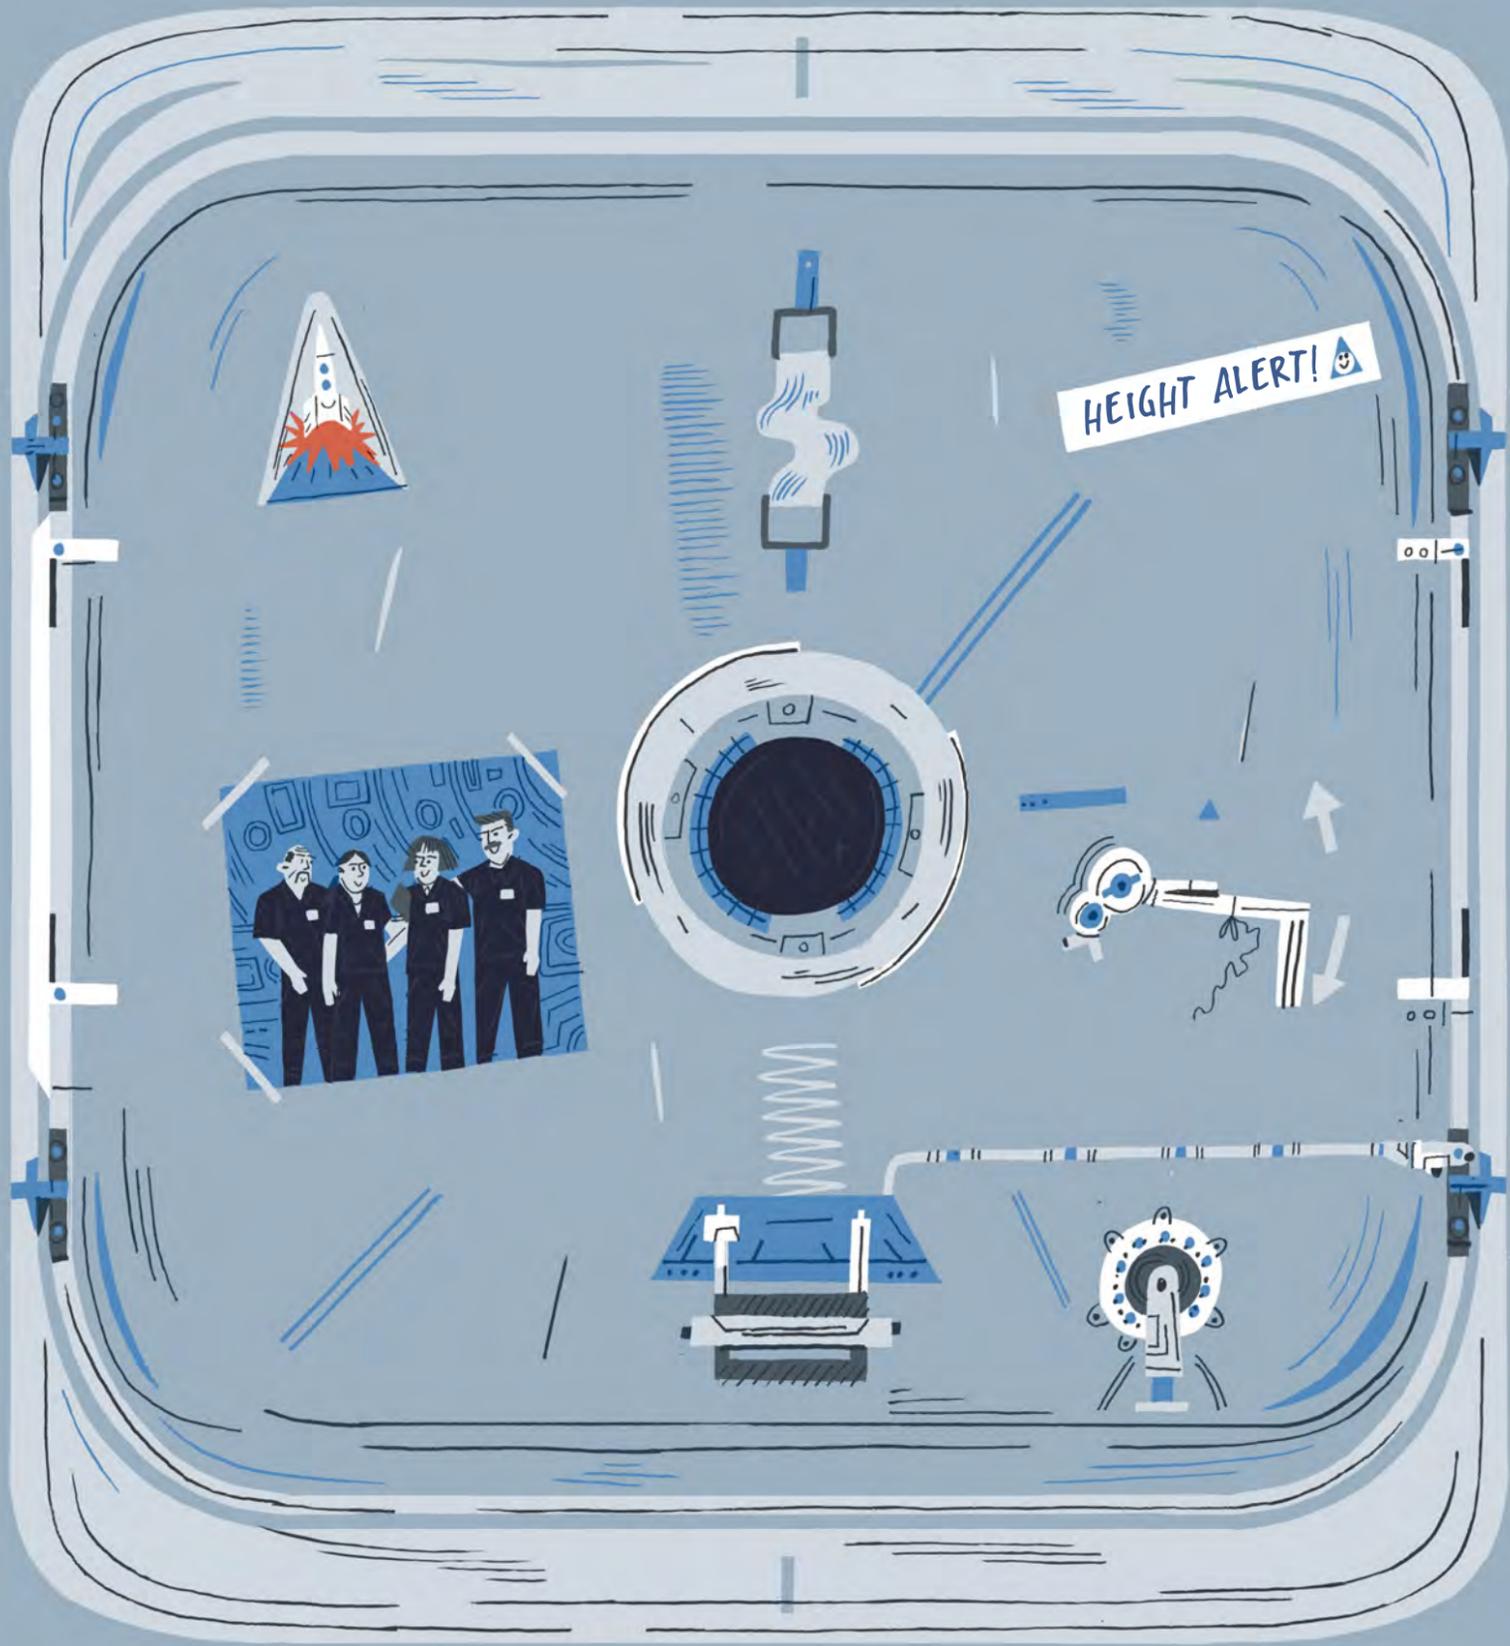

Car mechanics need strong muscles! Although machines help them with a lot of things, sometimes they need to carry heavy petrol cans or tyres.

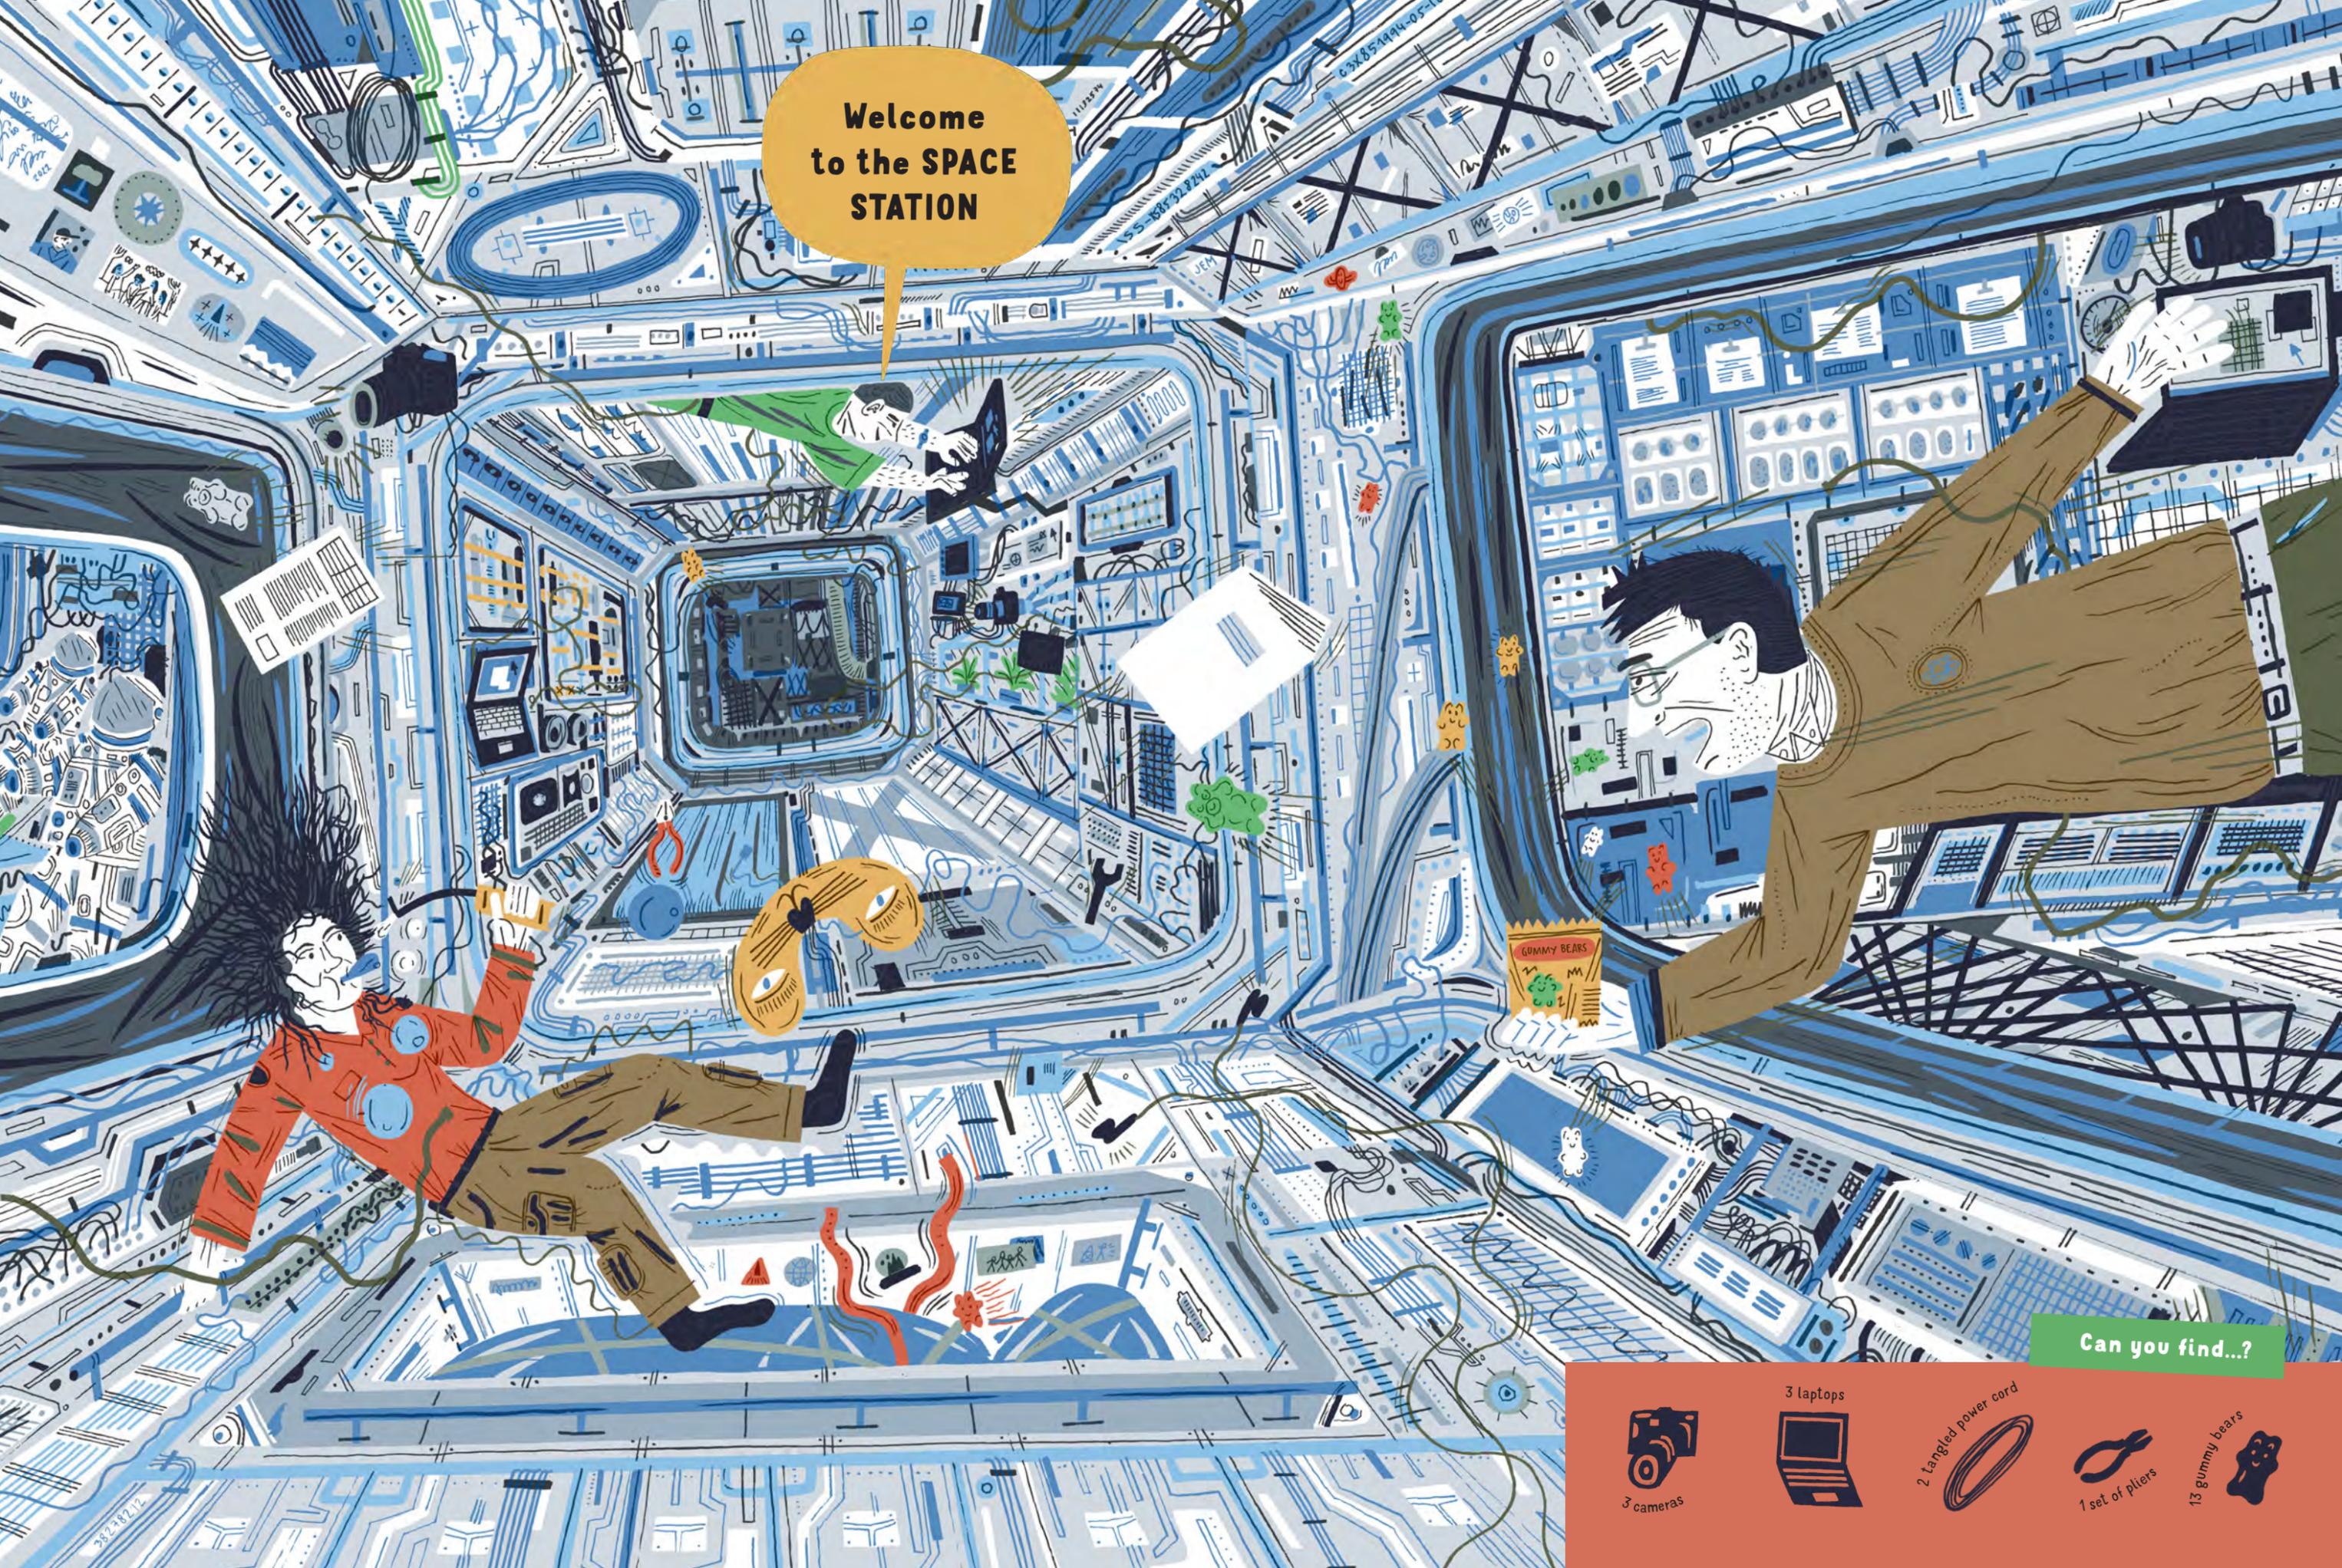

Mechanics learn their trade by working on different types of cars. Every car presents interesting challenges for a person who likes working on cars, regardless of how old or fancy it is.

If you love cars and are curious about how they work, you may have what it takes to become a car mechanic. A mechanic makes the lives of others easier by solving problems with their cars.

CHALLENGES AND JOYS OF WORKING IN SPACE

Being in a state of weightlessness brings with it various problems. In space, astronauts lose muscle, and their bones get thinner because their walking is not under the influence of Earth gravity. That's why they spend time every day exercising on special machines to keep up their strength.

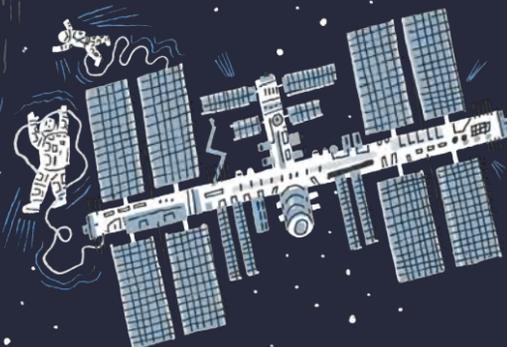

Astronauts have quite a varied diet: it's important for them to get all necessary nutrients. These days, they might treat themselves to fresh vegetables or a candy bar. Even so, the choice is limited compared to what they would get on Earth.

Up in a space station, astronauts are in the company of just a few colleagues. Although they can have fun together in their free time, if any of them don't get on, there is no way of avoiding each other.

Despite all the deprivation, astronauts experience something denied to most of us – they get a proper look at space! Surely that's worth giving up a few things for...

Welcome to the
ARTIST'S STUDIO

CHALLENGES AND JOYS OF BEING A PAINTER

An artist should have staying power, a passion for art and good self-discipline. Creation on demand is very hard to achieve, so there are no regular working hours. And as it requires being closed up in a studio for days at a time, a career in art often attracts introverts.

An ability to sketch whatever is in front of you comes in handy. Painters try out various techniques and technologies.

An artist works even when they appear to be doing nothing. Inspiration is everywhere. But sometimes artist's block sets in, and this is very difficult to deal with and get out of.

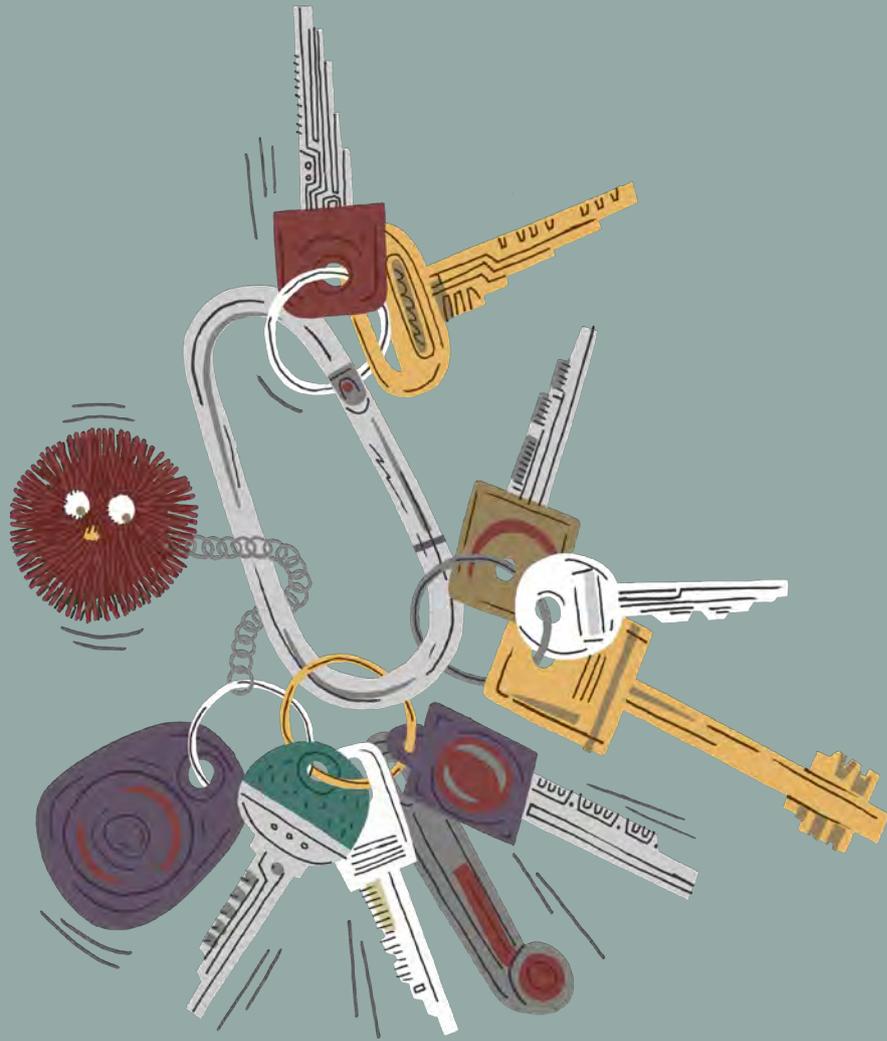

There are times when an image tells us far more than words can. An artist has a rich inner world, to which they give expression in their work.

WHAT'S BEHIND THAT DOOR?

written by Radka Piro • illustrated by Jakub Bachorík

A hand reaches for and grasps a doorhandle, pulls slowly...
Oh, the anticipation! Oh, the tension! What can be behind the door? A grubby broom cupboard or a vast hall? A doctor's office or a space station?

If you are someone who likes to make discoveries, is attracted by all closed doors and seeks answers to all questions, then this is just your kind of adventure! Ten mysterious doors, each with a room beyond. Can you guess what these rooms are?
